The High Steward of Scotland

Walter Stewart (c. 1296 – 9 April 1327 at Bathgate Castle) was the 6th hereditary High Steward of Scotland. He was also the father of King Robert II of Scotland.

Walter, 1st High Steward, though there may have been others. Alexander Stewart (1214-1283) was 4th hereditary High Steward of Scotland from his father's death in 1246.

The title of High Steward or Great Steward was given in the 12th century to Walter Fitzalan, whose descendants became the House of Steward/Stuart. Thus, currently, The Prince of Wales is High Steward of Scotland, sometimes known as the Prince and Great Steward of Scotland.

The legacies of the Stewart s are well documented in Scottish history. Walter FitzAlan was the First High Steward of Scotland assigned by King David. Walter Stewart, 6th High Steward of Scotland Facts for Kids Name, James Stewart [3]. Suffix, 5th High Steward of Scotland. Born, Abt 1243 [3]. Gender, Male. Died, 16 Jul 1309 [3]. Buried, Paisley Abbey, Paisley, Scotland.

Sir Walter STEWART, Of Dundonald, 3Rd High Steward Of Scotland was born in the year 1161 in Paisley (Renfrewshire), Scotland, son of Alan Fitzwalter, 2nd High Steward Of . The Stewart Family . - English Monarchs The title of High Steward or Great Steward was given in the 12th century to Walter Fitzalan, whose descendants became the House of Stewart. Thus, currently, The Prince of Wales is High Steward of Scotland, sometimes known as the Prince and Great Steward of Scotland.

The Stewart Family . - Scotland s History - In Depth The Stewart Family . - Scotland s History - In Depth
James Stewart (died 16 July 1309) was the 5th hereditary High Steward of Scotland and a Guardian of Scotland during the First Interregnum.